might be let, and if he chose a more reasonable could be fairly calculated on the available probability of what such a choice would fetch. But the counsel for the plaintiff did not even press this point. He merely surrendered the contention that the price was suitable for stores at all, and rested entirely on the possibilities of what a prudent auctioneer would call a "judicious" division, that is to say, a subdivision in which the largest number of tenants would be crowded on to the smallest space available; and, therefore, he surrendered space

posed when it was first opened out to the jury.
He adopted the view taken by Mr. MILLER the way to make the most out of the was to drop it up into little allotments and then to get Mr. MILLER in the of subdivision, and in the method of ing the capital, and the annual
Mr. PILCHER showed the total of out-the land for houses of the the Crown witnesses said it was He proposed to run a thirty-foot through the land from Murray-street railway—a very narrow street, and one though possible at the date of the resolution would not be sanctioned now. But by this narrow street, and then giving the taken a depth of only from 60 to 68 feet. Making Mr. MILLIS's liberal valuation on this frontage, he produced a resumption of $210,425, which is nearly £300,000. What he asked the jury to give. By the case in this way, he greatly simplified the task of the jury. They were left at liberty to throw out of their consideration all questions as to actual or even problematical agreements about wood stores, and they were requested to confine their attention solely to consideration of how many cottages of the kind were on the land, and how much rental could be got out of such premises. At the close, therefore, the issue was narrowed down to within a very small compass. It is impossible to overstate the importance had been put first instead of last, MILLER would have been limited simply to the evidence which was not only useless to the plainness of the trial need not have lasted ten minutes. It is quite possible that the evidence might have come better off. The evidence went to show that, looking at the manner in which the evidence was presented, the evidence was very liberal one. By retaining the evidence for thirteen times as much, MILLER laid upon the jury the duty of abstention not with liberalism, but with absolute strict justice. The difference in their verdict and the valuation

MILL, represented in their judgment the margin of that gentleman's liberality when the plaintiff's counsel asked for one-seventh of the amount of the deposit, and that the maximum he had evidence for at the highest press, had practically his authority derived directly with Mr. MILL's valuation as well as Mr. LUCAS himself. They took off more than one-fifth of what he had offered, but his own counsel had previously taken off more than six-sevenths of what he had asked. It is not often in a case kind that counsel admit by his remarks that the ground has so completely away from under him, or so entirely left his case from the shape in which he

The Rev. Prior BUTLER, of Melbourne denounced the education system of V as a gigantic monopoly. It is a costly, the rev. gentleman thinks, to such "power in the hands of a man who had power to override departmental regulations, and place over innocent children the character of the Commission." No doubt, and that thing that innocent children be presided over by such men as we then find their way to our Public schools is a good thing for the colonies; they have men like Prior BUTLER to denounce schoolmasters and tyrannical ments. Ecclesiastics, however, too assume that all State schoolmasters are of the same cloth. The following description that has been brought under special notice of the Victorian Committee is the black sheep in the education are the many, not the few; and the State system were demolished, a Denominational system re-established, would be no tyranny in the school no ment, and no abuses perpetrated by masters.

Prior BUTLER will find it a very task to get the public of these districts to assent to any such conclusions. It is natural enough that controversialists regard the shortcomings of their opponents as the foundation of the as arguments for the new views. Those who object to Denominationalism have done that, and they are right to complain that those who favour it follow their example abuses like those with which the Victorian Commission have had to deal. I tell against national systems of education, generally, they merely show that laxity has been allowed to mark the school system of Victoria. Unfortunately and sometimes bad men have used the schools of New South Wales, as into those of the neighbouring colony human nature is greatly improved suit will get into schools, and into a good places besides. Even churches have black sheep. Among the twelve apostles themselves there was a JUDAS. If the sons of Victoria were to respond to the demands of Prior BURLER, and pull down the gigantic monopoly which has been the occasion of so much poverty and suffering, setting up an ecclesiastical independence more appropriate to its place, even innocent children might get into the hands of the wicked. It might be that more honorable men would find their way into the schools under the ecclesiastical system than are in the habit of finding their way under the secular system. There is no ground for supposing that the one would have a great deal of advantage over the other in this respect.

It would be easy to prove that the clerical systems of education have been and then been worked by men for with whom innocent children would be no better. A writer in the For Review has lately been showing that the secular system of France, though being dechristianized and demoralized that the dechristianization is the cause the demoralization the effect. But is it

A correspondent to whose letter reference is made a day or two ago has put some difficulties in understanding how it is that we can satisfactorily pay for the balance of imports in excess of the exports of the colony. He admits that employment is abundant and wages high, but says that the funds from which these wages are paid are not so readily discoverable. He makes the following remarkable assertion, "Our production of wealth by no means commensurate with our consumption. It is on this in this position, our case would be that the man who over-spending his income was on his way to ruin. But it is that really our state! Though we have exported goods to the value of over two millions sterling in excess of our exports, it cannot be said they are consumed in the colony referred to. A very large proportion of them should stand on the credit and not on the debit side of the colony's balance-sheet for, as tion of the North-western Railway with the Great Northern Railway at Verre Creek, and 200 miles from Newarrick, the road crosses high above water level the river crossing; where it has been a character on this extension. There is one large cutting near Gannadish, from which some 40,000 cubic yards were excavated, but from this point to Bogalari the line passes over level rich alluvial flats upon a continuous embankment averaging from one foot to three feet in depth, formed from silt and sand deposited by the river during its annual openings. Cox's Creek, near Bogalari, is bridged by 20 timber openings of 26 feet span each, and an adjacent tributary of this creek by 11 timber openings of a similar span. The passenger station at Bogalari is a most brick building with cement dressings, and contains ample accommodation—viz., 100 x 12 ft. ticket office, baggage room, waiting-room 14 x 14, lamp room, yard, latrine, &c. The stationmaster's house is also of brick, and is one story in height, containing four large-sized rooms, and little known, and several which have only recently been scientifically classified. The specimens secured are all very fine ones, some, indeed, being remarkable in size; and many of the best were purchased in the fish market by Mr. Ramsay himself, who has been very successful in securing some of the best representation of this branch of our food supply. The remainder were sent in by people employed by the proprietor to go out fishing for them, and nearly every day sees some addition to the collection. Among the best fish yet prepared are some John Dory, mummy-looking creatures, with grotesque heads and curious side marks. They are about the size of a small fish, but have a very singular shape, and their way into the open market, as fishermen know they can always dispose of them profitably to private customers. Another specimen catches your attention; and indeed it is related of one enthusiastic angler who had the unusual luck to catch four or five of them one fine morning, that, right at the time of their appearance, he inadvertently returned them to the deep as fast as he could. The fish had been taken at the same place, and for this mistake, he has never taken another John Dory. There are some mangegal, with golden-red scales and great ruby eyes; three species of carp; black rock cod; flying kurnard, resembling giant flying-fish; a great many species of perch; herrings of two or three kinds, very like those which frequent the English coasts; several species allied to the herring; the tasty sea bream, which is much used by the natives; the sea bream; black bream, and a remarkably fine black snapper. It is sometimes caught on the schapper grounds, and is always regarded as a prize, since it is superior in flavour even to the schapper. It has been named Glaucousma opesalpe, a formulae name which any fish would find it difficult to bear with indignance, and hence may arise that retching, unpleasant habit, which so effectually protects it from capture. The schapper shows a set of white skin; so are the

A MAGISTRATE'S INQUIRY was held yesterday morning, in the Annandale Hotel, Leichhardt, by the acting coroner, Mr. W. T. Pinney, J.P., on the bodies of William George Haines, aged 8 years, and Frederick Haines, aged 6 years, found drowned in a waterhole on Thursday afternoon. From the evidence taken, it appears that the deceased were last seen alive at about a quarter to 8 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, when they were playing in front of their father's home. The father was at work a little distance away. The boys went off from the house, and at about five minutes

As an indication of the tone which outside settlement is at present assuming it may be mentioned that Messrs. Macdonnell, Loughnan, and Sear, of this district, have secured for Messrs. J. Wilson and C. H. Munro, of the Victoria mill race, one of the richest and best-watered country in the vicinity of Forrest's Creek, in the 145 Camp, Kimbrikey District. West Australia, in which the lessees have named "Edith Plains." Some swampland deposited in the district are reported as doing well; and it is also reported that several large mobs of cattle are travelling to this least-known portion of our continent. A well-equipped party are on their way via Port Darwin, and have the necessary horses on board to enable them, on arrival at Cambridge Gulf, to explore the country north and south of Mr. Forrest's station. Cambridge Gulf is said to possess great natural advantages for a harbour, and from its geographical position would make an important outlet for Delamere and the West.

points, but at Brighton the two last carriages, and at Elenburg the seven last carriages, were thrown off the line. Traffic was interfered with for some hours, but none of the passengers were injured.

A third railway accident occurred on the Hobson's Bay line this afternoon. Just after a train to St. Kilda had left the central station, the engine ran on to the Sandridge line, and some carriages were dragged off the rails, damaging the permanent way, while the line was blocked for an hour. The accident occurred through the non-working of the points.

Mr. Gladman, Superintendent of the Teachers' Training Institute, in giving evidence before the Education Commission, stated that the institution turned out fifty to sixty scholars a year. The Department, however, required from ninety to one hundred new teachers annually.

Mr. Gardiner intends to table a motion for the exclusion of the press from Parliament.

Captain Donaldson, of the ship Cheviot, has declined to accept the decision of the Minister of Customs, who forbids the importation of gold, and the imposition of a fine amounting to three times the value. The case will, therefore, come before a Court. The Cheviot was allowed to clear out to-day on the understanding that the matter shall be dealt with on her return. The value of the jewellery is only about £400.

The contractor for the Wallaby Creek works connection with the water supply, states that he is unable to complete his contract, and has stipulated for time in consequence of the difficulty of procuring quarries. Common labourers are receiving 12s per day and rations.

Collier's jewellery shop at Hotham was broken into last night, and carriage, studs, and rings to the value of £180 were stolen.

A distressing suicide occurred in the Yarra at about noon. A fashionably-dressed young woman, who was observed to be walking backwards and forwards on the south bank of the river, near the Botanical Gardens bridge, suddenly walked to the edge of the river and jumped in. A young man, who was standing on the river bank, rushed to the spot, but the young woman sank just as he reached her. The police are dragging the river, but the body has not yet been recovered, nor has any clue been obtained as to her identity.

Prosecutions continue to be brought by Ex-cis officers against publicans guilty of selling inferior liquors from bottles bearing well known trade marks. This morning a publican named Hyams was fined £5 and five guineas costs; another named Mulesley was fined £15 and £10 costs. In the latter case Mr. Purvis commented severely on the character of the hotel, and pressed for the maximum penalty of £100.

An attempt was made yesterday to place obstructions on the railway line between Geelong and Colac. A large sapling, a clothes line, and a quantity of gravel and ballast were put on the line, evidently by boys. The line repairer noticed and removed the obstructions before any train passed over the line.

Mr. Berry and Major Smith visited Geelong to-day on the occasion of the opening of a new school, and were entertained at a banquet by the residents.

A seizure of jewellery was made to-day on board the steamer Barabool when she arrived from Sydney. The customs officer who boarded the vessel had his attention directed to a small box in charge of the chief officer, who said he had signed a receipt for it, but did not know to whom it was consigned. Thereupon the officer took charge of the box.

The Premier has received a letter from Messrs. Gray and Dawson, representatives of the British India S. N. Co., stating that the company are building two new boats for the Queensland trade, which will be fitted up for the accommodation of emigrants and the carriage of frozen meat. It is expected that these vessels will be completed in November and January respectively. The trade is much larger than was anticipated, and the company intend to spare no efforts to make the service a thorough success. It is considered that it will never give full satisfaction as a mail service until a swift branch steamer meets the larger vessels at Cooktown or Townsville. This, however, will be arranged. One of the local companies intend to consider the propriety of building some good boats specially for the coasting trade.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

Courtesy for the Ercildoune Club, run under the auspices of the Ballarat Club, on St. Paul's Wilson's estate, was concluded to-day. The stakes were won by the Hon. J. Bromell's Tom Nipper, by Jew from Swift; the runner-up being T. C. Napier's Kita, by Dean Swift from Mudge Wilford.

HAY JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

HAY, FRIDAY.

The second day of the Hay Jockey Club races was not in point of attendance, as successful as the first. Very few visitors from Sydney were present, and the stand offered miserable accommodation. The weather was fine. The German Band, from Sydney, enlivened the proceedings considerably. There were six events on the programme, and the racing generally exceeded the handicapping, of a good class. The first race was over hurdles, and in this of four starters took part. The rider of one was rather seriously hurt. Half-a-dozen started for the Midwinter Handicap, and Mullatto, with top weight, won comfortably, beating Manulake, who was a fair favourite, by two lengths. The third race was a mere matter of time between Mullatto and the runner-up, a credible son of Hamlet, again carried over, and won, beating Britisher, the favourite, by a length. Eight started for the Murrumbidgee Handicap, and Peeping Tom, by Friar, carried 12 lb., in the front, beating First Light, by Get. 6 lb., by a bare nose. Mystery, a black mare, whose identity there was some doubt, was third. The Selling Race was rather a thing of nothing, and the last sport was won by Severus, by Hercules.

HAY, FRIDAY.

The second day of the Hay Jockey Club races was not in point of attendance, as successful as the first. Very few visitors from Sydney were present, and the stand offered miserable accommodation. The weather was fine. The German Band, from Sydney, enlivened the proceedings considerably. There were six events on the programme, and the racing generally exceeded the handicapping, of a good class. The first race was over hurdles, and in this of four starters took part. The rider of one was rather seriously hurt. Half-a-dozen started for the Midwinter Handicap, and Mullatto, with top weight, won comfortably, beating Manulake, who was a fair favourite, by two lengths. The third race was a mere matter of time between Mullatto and the runner-up, a credible son of Hamlet, again carried over, and won, beating Britisher, the favourite, by a length. Eight started for the Murrumbidgee Handicap, and Peeping Tom, by Friar, carried 12 lb., in the front, beating First Light, by Get. 6 lb., by a bare nose. Whatever the fighting qualities of the Dutch may have been in the days of the Vikings, they certainly are not successful as their compatriots in the present day. The Achinese were more than two years of what he has made them matters of so many miles from the sea coast. What if they should have adopted as the policy for Java a more peaceable and pleasant mode of conquest. If throwing away the sword and taking up the hoe, the Achinese might have become rich and powerful by other means. Their general type are gradually becoming established their rule on a safe basis by products of commerce and industry, with family relationships connecting the two races like a bridge thrown across a previously impassable torrent. The effect of this kind of generalship is readily visible in the populous towns, and a race is springing up with strong proclivities for the customs of their white progenitors, while at the same time those indigenous to the climate, which they once better healthily despised.

The result is, to use a trade expression, the home-grown goods are taking the place of the imported article, many men of limited means preferring the former to the latter on the score of expense, there not being so many doctors' bills to pay.

(On retiring to bed you make the discovery that there are no bedclothes, the nights being warm enough without, and instead of a mosquito net, supplied with one before your first cigar or pipe, and you find it necessary to go before you retire to bed.) Chinese hawkers have pounded upon you and unpicked their wares, consisting of all kinds of wearing apparel suitable to the climate; and as you are sure to require something, you become interested in the wares they exhibit; but it is dangerous work attempting to deal with them until you have gained experience, for men seldom know how to handle such things, and you must contend with the greatest awkwardness. I will ask you, say, 10 rupees, and you, thinking to bid low with the intimation of meeting them, offer three rupees. With a look of injured innocence, as though they were grieved at your attempt to wrong them, they will, without further parley, hand them over to you with the remark, "Kun, kun, mada-mah-tioe money!" This is the usual method used, which is very much too late to be of any practical service, you realize the fact that they have paid three rupees for what you could have had for one and a-half or two at the most, and with the coolest impudence in the world they will offer you a similar article at that price.

Before you are rid of the Chinese, a party of Arab traders bombard you with cases of soap, and boxes of silver tobacco pipes, and the fellow who offers the silverware is dangerous than the Chinese, because their goods are more expensive. One fellow, after many protestations, offered me a little experience, and particularly wanting the articles, I offered eight rupees, but without waiting to see whether he would accept my offer, he continued pestering me with "how much more than 10 dollars will you give, master," for a tray worth about half-a-dollar. So, with the valuable awais, &c., fresh in my memory, and being desirous of getting rid of the fellow, said, "I'll give you 10 dollars for the lot, and go into business myself." In an instant the baskets were pushed forward to me with the remark, "Wan-ke-tai!" and the fellow was off, leaving me the amusement of my friends, who nearly brought the house down with guffaws of laughter, for when I lifted off the covers there were only some trays and other common things, the lot not being worth more than three or four dollars, and I didn't want them at any price, which he evidently saw from my count, as he stood up by saying, "Wan-ke-tai!"

"The fellow's words would be raised; so this gave me a cue, and I determined to pay him in his own coin. I told him that I held him in very great respect, and could not think of his ruining himself on my account; that if I thought he would lose 20 dollars through me, it would bring my gray hairs with sorrow to my grave, so on that point I refused to do anything back to him, which turned the laugh on him, for his friends enjoyed the fun as much as mine did, and they all understood English thoroughly.

The railway having opened the day before to Suka Bumi, a distance of 42 miles beyond Batavia, where the Governor-General resides, we availed ourselves of the opportunity of travelling about the country during the forenoon.

The line is a fine gauge, and fairly well-laid, but there has not been much money wasted in fancy work; the carriages are very plain; there are three classes. All the Europeans, with the exception of the biggest big-wigs, travel second-class. So, not desiring to be taken for the Governor-General, we also travelled second.

The journey is a very enjoyable one, the scenery is not bad, although the air is rather good breeze, which is sufficient to tempt the heat, which would otherwise be excessive, and as we specially liked the city and suburbs, it might easily be imagined we were travelling through an English agricultural district; only, instead of wheat fields, they are paddy-fields, the paddy being of all stages of growth, in many places of the rice seedlings are still green, and in others already being ploughed. Sugar cane, bananas, groves of coconuts, rambutan mangosteen, durian, pineapple, and jack-fruits, rows of pineapples, fields of sweet potato—these, and many others, were pointed out to us as we hurried past them. By-and-by, as we got into higher land, the terraced paddies became more noticeable, and you begin to feel that you are entering a new world, and carry out such genuine engineering, and such skillful manipulation of watercourses for purposes of irrigation, for this system of terracing was in existence long before the advent of the Dutch or other Europeans. Coffee, cinchona, and tea are also grown here, and there is little doubt that they will all prove very profitable crops.

The planters, therefore, are beginning to turn their eyes to the direction of the virgin soil of Australia. Having lunched at Suka Bumi, we returned to Buitenzorg for the night, and found the evening a little cooler than Batavia, but not much.

From the hotel balcony we had a glorious view of Gunung Salak, a large volcano which entirely fills up the horizon, and is really quite imposing. A light drizzle but has been quietly sleeping for nearly 200 years, light under our feet is the river, from the bed of which a number of coolies are fishing up gravel, and then carrying it in small boats to ballast the railway line, which must be at least 100 feet above the bed of the river. We viewed the markets, and one or two of the principal streets, and then retired to rest, after trimmings, on which we laboured honestly for about a quarter of an hour, but we were not enthusiastic in its praise, and I have not heard of either party going for it a second time.

We visited the Botanic Gardens, but were very much disappointed, as from the luxuriant vegetation outside, we expected to find something different, and feeling sure there must be something better than was seen, we wandered about for two hours, but without result. Walking here was very tiring, as the footpaths are all paved with little pebbles, or boulders from the size of a walnut to that of an egg, and the rains having washed cut all the binding, it was almost like doing penance to have passed along them. As the sun shone brightly, and in the afternoon we returned to Batavia, having spent two days amongst the most lovely scenery imaginable, feeling that for the remaining term of our natural lives the Botanic Gardens would interest us no more.

Batavia, although exceedingly beautiful to the eye, is very unbecoming to the European, or even Australian, eye, and the climate is somewhat disagreeable, and unsuitable to the climate; it is worse, the slightest draught drenches you with perspiration. As for taking healthy exercise, it is entirely out of the question; even walking must be dispensed with, except in the early morning or the evening. At the time of our visit cholera

BURGAROL.—There is a large brick and wooden house of six bedrooms, two bathrooms and office, brick dairy and cold larder, servants' rooms, store, blacksmith's shop, shoemaker and miller's huts; also, garden, with water laid on.
 Woolshed, with separate and complete pens for 34 sheep, and with one of Williams' patent racks and plating wool presses, and a large shed for the use of the sheep.

TULLADUNNA.—There is a house, kitchen, wool-scour fixtures, oaks, tanks, furnaces, sheds, woolpacs, &c.

There are also, on different parts of the run, six cottages for labourers; also, four boundary-riders' huts, conveniently placed for the management of the run, and a steamboat to Sydney in 27 per cent, which will be materially reduced on completion of the railway to Narrabri.

The agents, in calling attention to this valuable pastoral property, have particularly to point out to the extensive improvement which has been completed under the superintendence of the resident partner, a gentleman of undoubted and ripe practical experience.

The large extent of the selected purchased land, together with thoroughly secure investments, and the agents have entire confidence in recommending inspection, for which every facility will be afforded.

Letters of introduction and the fullest information will be supplied on application at the offices of the Auctioneers, Bourke-street West, Melbourne; or Messrs. W. SLOANE and C. Melbourne or Sydney.

MR. GEORGE GIBSON and CO. have received instructions from Charles Hope, Esq., to sell by auction (in conjunction with Messrs. W. SLOANE and C. Melbourne) the property of the late Sir James Hope, Bart., at THURSDAY, the 20th July next, at half-past 2 o'clock, THE BEEMERY STATION,

Warrego District,
NEW SOUTH WALES,
containing an estimated area of 614,310 Acres Crown lands, together with 65,000 Sheep,
150 Horses.

This property is situate between Bourke and Berrurra, on the Darling River, to which it has a frontage of 40 miles, besides having an extensive double frontage to the Hogan River, and is otherwise watered by several large tanks.

The country is specially adapted for sheep, being open scrub and grass plain, and every acre is available.

The improvements are most complete, comprising over

Great attention has been paid to the sheep for many years. The present proprietor, who, in stocking up, spared no expense in procuring the best of the country, has been successful in introducing the introduction of rams bred entirely from Mr. John L. Curtis's flocks, they rank equal to any sheep in New South Wales.

Wales, and of the number now to be sold are about 37,000 ewes lamb this season.

It is most common to be specially situated for carriages, as shepherds to the wool direct from the shed to Behuch or Victor Harbor, particularly low rates, and it is also favourably situated for principal markets of Australia, and as a wool-growing or fattening country it is not to be surpassed.

Delivery will be given of the shears, the purchaser paying shearing expense, and taking the wool.

SHEEP OR CATTLE COUNTRY.

RICHARD GIBSON AND CO. have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at Menzies' Hotel, on 20th JULY.

South Gregory District of
QUEENSLAND,
containing an estimated area of
450 SQUARE MILES.

This country is most conveniently situated, being in Queensland on the borders of South Australia and New South Wales, and therefore within easy distance of the proposed railway to Government Game from Thargomindah.

It consists of mulga ridges interspersed with salt and soda bush, running in all directions; blue Mitchell and blue grasses and herbs are in great variety, and there is sufficient timber for fencing.

FORT BOURKE STATION,
Darling River, N.S.W.

SALE at the Rooms, 79, Collins-street West, Melbourne, TUESDAY, the 16th July, 1884, at half-past 2 o'clock p.m. THE FOW HOUSE STATION, with 100,000 SHEEP, 40,000 of which are pickled, 5000 lambs, now lambing.

This station is situated on the Darling River, to which it is frontage of 30 miles direct, equal to about 50 miles water frontage. The estimated area is 370,000 acres, of which 100,000 are not watered. The remainder of the frontage is permanently watered, and the back by tanks, dams, larks, and a permanent billabong 10 miles from the river.

The run is thoroughly fenced, and subdivided by six or seven wire fences (cattle and sheep proof); also 14 large, and numerous small, permanent tanks are splendid, and not to be surpassed;—

woolshed, newly erected, of red gum and iron, unequalled in solidity and design, has accommodation for 36 shearers, and is fitted for sorting room and wool store, from which a branchway runs to the steamer.

The shearer's head is of dressed bluestone, with verandah all round, and cost £2500, the fittings throughout being of the very best description; there is an overcase of hune, two outside doors, and all necessary outbuildings; also, an engine, and a pump, with which we laid on 100,000 gallons of water. The shearer's station is estimated to cost £50,000, and from the ewes at present lambing, we expect at least 50 per cent. increase may be expected. The ewes have been selected from some of the best stations in Riverina, particularly from Moira and Narracan; the rams are also of the best blood, and of great size, no expense has been spared in procuring the best blood of the district, and the first selections in the market.
